Casa de las Nubes

Situated on a hilltop in La Tierra northwest of Santa Fe, this estate overlooks the Upper Rio Grande Valley to the west, and offers unequalled mountain views in all directions. The 18 acre adobe estate offers a peaceful sanctuary in the wilderness, while conveniently located only a short drive to Santa Fe's downtown, museums, and art galleries. The 8,410 square foot Pueblo Revival residence with 3 bedrooms and 3 full and 3 half baths was designed by architect William Lumpkins for painter Eric Sloane, a member of the National Academy. Built in the mid 1970's, the unique home was expanded in 1989 by architect Philippe Register. The recent renovations have added contemporary amenities making the home ideal for entertaining, with space to accommodate large parties in elegant surroundings. The kitchen, dining, and entertaining facilities are appointed and equipped to please the most demanding owner or caterer. Additional improvements include an office building, studio 1 bedroom guest house, caretaker's house, generator back up power, and water storage / fire prevention system. Deservedly named, Casa de las Nubes (House of the Clouds) is an exceptional retreat situated in the inspiring natural beauty of northern New Mexico.
